ATLANTIC CITY -- The Atlantic City Free Public Library was looking a little more like an artist's workshop today.

A group of local kids ages 12 to 17 were invited to paint a 12 by 12 inch section of a mural designed by graffiti artist Stephen Gibson.

The mural serves as one of the visual highlights of the new Teen Space that the library is now constructing.

The 985 square foot room will be used as a place for teens to gather, learn, and relax.

And now that the mural is completed, there's only a little more to do before the room opens to the public this September.
